Excerpt: .weak or vicious character were transmitted. Probably through a long stream of blood, but we must know that neither came as a matter of chance. The one was just as much a legacy as the other. Placing an inheritance is often difficult for the reason that it may be the result of complex causes and combined forces. Possibly no one in the preceding generations had red hair, but there must have been sufficient in the aggregate of that kind of pigment to produce one such head in the family. This same principle of transmission applies to the health, the brain and the morals of the descendants. The exact ailment of body or malady of mind may not be traceable to any one source, but it has been handed down. Ivegacie;-of money seem to fall in most cases to those who are already fortunate.
